

Ignacio Martín-Baró's Vision Today: Progress for All in El Salvador?

Susan Bird

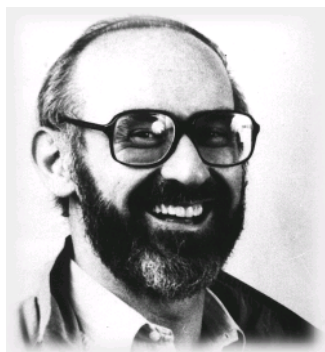

Celebration of the Peace Accords—January 16, 1989
Courtesy of Museo de la Palabra y la Imagen Virtual Gallery

Monday, June 1, 2009 at 6PM
Center for Latin American Studies
Conference Room -Kelly Hall 117
5848 S. University Ave

FREE FOOD FROM POLLO CAMPERO

Susan Bird has been an international human rights worker for 10 years. Her experience includes working with Oxfam America as the Director of the Office for Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean based in El Salvador, where she directed human rights and development programming in 6 countries. She has also worked with Save the Children in Mexico. Susan holds a masters degree from the School for International Training and is currently working on a second masters at the University of Chicago.

Ignacio Martín-Baró Human Rights Essay Prize Awards Ceremony

The prize honors the memory of Ignacio Martín-Baró, a Jesuit priest from El Salvador who earned a Ph.D. in Social Psychology at the University of Chicago. Martín-Baró taught at the Universidad de Centro America in El Salvador and was a leading scholar on social justice and human rights. In 1989, Martín-Baró and seven others were assassinated by the Salvadoran Army for their commitment to El Salvador's dispossessed. In 2008, the Center for Justice and Accountability filed suit on behalf of Martín-Baró's family in Spain to bring the Jesuits' killers to justice.

